Ms. Johnson launched CMT Services, Inc. in 2002 to provide pricing strategy support and development to government contractors and consulting companies. Under Ms. Johnson's leadership, CMT's business service offerings has expanded to include: Health and Environmental Services, Staff Augmentation, Information Technology, Program Management and Education and Training.

As the former Director of Pricing for Lockheed Martin Information Technology, she was responsible for establishing corporate estimating and pricing policies, negotiating subcontractor pricing, developing price proposals for major government procurements and leading pricing audits with the Defense Contract Audit Agency (DCAA). In addition, Ms. Johnson was responsible for the development of Lockheed Martin's training program for Pricing Analysts, Project Leaders and Program Administrators.

Prior to Lockheed Martin, Ms. Johnson served as Director of Pricing for OAO Corporation, a privately held information technology and aerospace engineering company providing $350 million annually in services to the Department of Defense (DOD) and Civilian government agencies. In that capacity she led the company's price proposal development activities for all major proposals and instituted OAO's unique global approach to price proposal development.

A native of Washingtonian, Johnson she is a member of the International Cost Estimating and Analysis Association, Women's President Organization, National Association of Female Executives, Women Impacting Public Policy, Vice President Prince George's Community College Alumni Association, member and former Board Secretary Retired Military Officers Association (RMOA).
